

Economise, Soon after this my uncle was taken ill & my brother nursed him with Bronchitis. He had never mentioned making a will but one night he said I wish to make my will & truly, At that time there was no solicitor in Kingswood but a solicitor's Chief Clerk, so he came & after making the will, my Father said, now I must find two witnesses, The Chief Clerk a Mr Cook said, only one, you have not been left a legacy only your wife so you can sign, my father was rather doubtful but signed. My uncle died a few days afterwards, The will was sent to the lawyer at Ponty pool. On the day of my Uncle's funeral, the lawyer came with the will & told my parents the will was void, owing to my Father's signature, It was a great blow to them as my Mother was sole legatee, the money my Uncle had put in the business had to be paid back into the estate, & all had to be divided up to husband & wife, my Mother only had a very small share. It was a very sad time for us children, even our furniture had to be bought back as they took a bill of Sale on that because of business closing. & our savings as well, Eventually my Father had another situation as Manager
